'Ports war' is FVR smokescreen—Miriam

By Cynthia O. Arceles

SEN. MIRIAM SANGALAN yesterday accused President Fidel Ramos of engineering a "ports war" when the latter asked the Sangay Movement to withdraw support for the proposed port law, saying the move is the sign of "double game."

In a statement, Sangalan said a vote by the Sangay Movement was a repudiation of the Sangay Movement's support for the proposed port law.

"Ramos is playing a double game with a mouth that says he has the people's backing of the port law while secretly, he knows he is trying to crush the law and force another law for his political and the personal利益 of those who profit and pad against the people's interests," she said.

Sangalan said Ramos was "playing a war that does not exist."

The senator also said she was wondering why Ramos suddenly became so "opinionated" as well as an "anti-law" man.

Finally, she said that part of the project to develop housing for Sangay Movement members.

The other day Sangalan had the support of the Sangay Movement project committee but to do with the study during past elections.

The current Sangay Movement was triggered by a privilege speech by Sangalan, the former president's architect. Sangalan had accused Ramos of stealing from her the presidency during the 1992 presidential election.

The discrepancy is most likely due to the fact that the study was conducted in a hospital setting, which may have influenced the results. For example, the study did not include patients who were not admitted to the hospital, which may have led to an overestimation of the prevalence of the condition.

Students learned particularly well the use of the 30-minute story session at the end of the lesson. The 15-minute and 45-minute sessions had more negative feedback than the 30-minute session. During the 30-minute session, the students were able to learn the most.

It is the way people are being educated, and that is what matters, says the author. The book is a collection of essays, and it is a good read. I recommend it to all who are interested in the future of education.

As the author of Wings, "one of the most important" of the 19th-century American novels, Wings is a masterpiece of the genre. It is a story of a young man, a young woman, and a young man, who are all in love with each other. The story is set in the 19th century, and it is a story of love, of passion, and of the struggle for freedom.
